About the project

Summary

The project “Culture and Heritage in Communication - Using Cultural Heritage in Development of Communicative Competence and Interculturality in Foreign Language Learning” (CHIC – In Action!) focuses on foreign language teaching in adult education and aims to define how cultural heritage of the participating countries can be used as a language teaching tool.

Cultural heritage and language teaching

The aim of the European Year of Cultural Heritage (2018) was to encourage more people to discover and engage in Europe's cultural heritage and to foster a shared sense of identity and build the future of Europe.

The project aims at using culture as a tool for foreign language teaching, choosing English language as the common language taught in all the partners organizations. Communication in English will be developed not only by talking about English culture (as we are used to) but talking and discovering cultural heritage of the countries participating in the project.

The relationship between language and culture is a complex one and it is always quite challenging to fully understand people's cognitive processes when they communicate. Language competence does not only include the knowledge of grammatical principles and sentence construction, but also knowledge of the norms that link language to social and cognitive context. It is impossible to understand a culture without having some form of understanding of its language.

Aims and impact

The project, based on analysis and comparison of the state of language teaching in the entire education system (from primary to adult education), is giving special attention to foreign language teaching in adult education in the six project partners' countries. The aim is to define how cultural heritage of these countries can be used as a language teaching tool by project partners' and other countries. It is in accordance with the general improvement of the adult education offers and adult teachers' competences.

This aim will be achieved by the following two Intellectual Outputs (IOs) that will involve two target groups: adult learners and adult teachers/educators:
